INSTRUCTIONS

- (1) This paper consists of 15 questions. Answer ALL questions.
- (2) All questions carry equal marks.
- (3) You should mark only ONE answer for each question. You will score no marks for choosing two or more answers to the same question.

Time limit: 15 minutes
(For initial practice, continue to answer even if you exceed the time limit)

Directions

In this test, each passage is followed by a few statements (the questions). You have to assume what is stated in the passage is true and decide whether the statements are either:

A. True

The statement is already made or implied in the passage, or follows logically from the passage.

B. False

The statement contradicts what is said, implied by, or follows logically from the passage.

C. Can't tell

There is insufficient information in the passage to establish whether the statement is true or false.

(BPT) - It is a common misperception that ADHD, a neurodevelopmental disorder characterized by inappropriate levels of inattention, impulsivity and hyperactivity, only affects children. In fact, research shows that nearly 11 million adults have ADHD and only one of five is properly diagnosed. Symptoms are influenced by age and developmental level. For example, adults experience less hyperactivity and more executive functioning issues in comparison to children.

1. People with ADHD are mostly diagnosed during their childhood.

2. Children with ADHD are more likely to behave abnormally active than adults.

3. About 20% of the adult population might have ADHD.

The biggest risk facing the world's insurance companies is possibly the rapid change now taking place within their own ranks. Sluggish growth in core markets and intense price competition, coupled with shifting patterns of customer demand and the rising cost of losses, are threatening the industry.

4. Insurance companies are experiencing a boom in their core markets.

5. Insurance companies are competing in terms of price.

6. Insurance companies are coping well with increased price competition and rising losses.

The increasing fragility of the rural economy will be the biggest challenge facing country communities over the next ten years. Agriculture, which accounts for a quarter of rural job, is in decline. Tourism provides no more than half this number of jobs. The rural manufacturing sector, however, has grown over last ten years. Despite this, it still employs fewer than one in twenty people living in rural area, and is threatened by companies based in industrial areas, which benefit from access to a larger skilled workforce and better transportation networks.

7. Manufacturing provides the fewest jobs in the rural area.

8. Industries based in rural areas suffer from poorer transport links.

A new computer program can tell whether a book was written by a man or a woman. By scanning the keywords and syntax, it has about 80% accuracy on both fiction and non-fiction books. The program's success seems to confirm the stereotypical perception of differences in male and female language use. In short, men talk more about objects and women more about relationships.

Female writers use more pronouns (I, you, she, myself), while males prefer words that identify or determine nouns (a, the, that) and words that quantify them (one, two, more). These differing styles have previously been called "involved" and "informational", respectively.

9. Women are more likely than men to adopt an "informational" style of written communication.

10. The program is more accurate at identifying the gender of the writer than the fiction or non-fiction content of the passage.

Over the past decade there has been a steady growth in the holiday industry while the number of travel agencies has declined. This is due to the increasing number of customers who are booking their holidays online, because of a quicker and more financially viable service.

However, specialist travel agencies, such as those focusing on particular regions or holiday activities, remain successful as they have an in-depth understanding of a region and the customers who go there. The staffs are also multilingual, and thanks to their specialized knowledge they can provide good deals, meaning that their prices are often lower than non-specialist travel agents and online companies.

11. It is always cheaper for the customer to book holidays online than with a travel agent.

12. More people are booking their holidays online rather than through a travel agent, even though it takes longer to find the right holiday this way.

Financial fraud is a crime of growing significantly. In 2013, 8% of reported business-related crimes were fraud, averaging $35,000 in losses. By 2015, while financial fraud was found to be the sixth-most frequent crime, it was the third-highest concern amongst business leaders.

Researchers found that, globally, internet-based fraud was rising dramatically in 2015. The main reasons for fraud included poor supervision and lack of proper division of duties, inadequate control of access to system, and poor authorization controls.

Internal detective measures uncovered less than half of the cases, with an increasing number of cases being discovered by accident.

13. Over half of all cases of fraud in 2015 were discovered by accident.

14. A proper division of duties might prevent fraud from happening.

15. Business leaders are more concerned about financial fraud than before because of the growth of the Internet.
